ARTLAND PEOPLE STAND BEHIND A. F. WRIGHT

The election case of Wright and Swarbrick originally came up before Magistrate Knott, of Unity, for hearing and on account of the sickness of Mr. Swarbrick, was adjourned to January 20th, on which date Mr. Knott had to notify the parties that sickness prevented his attendance.

Later on, Magistrate Dinsley tried the case at Scott and imposed a fine of $200.00 on Mr. Wright and a nominal fine on Mr. Swarbrick.

The men were charged with having been irregular in the conduct of the Municipal Election at Artland and the complaint was laid by Messrs Marquardt, W. J. Forran, M. L. Forran, Lewis Wilson and J. G. Kitching.

While it is not denied that some (Continued on inner page)

NATIONAL ASPECT OF THE THRIFT CAMPAIGN

By Dr. ADAM SHORTT

Many persons appear to be more or less sceptical as to the necessity of even the advantage of continuing the campaign of thrift and saving now that the war is over. A few of the reasons chiefly from a national point of view, for the continuation of this policy, and, incidentally, for promoting the investment in thrift stamps, may be stated.

In the first place, though the war has ended so propitiously for the Allies and, therefore for Canada, the vast heavy national outlay involved in our contribution towards the present safety and future freedom of civilization is far from being paid off. Apart from the heavy taxation required to gradually liquidate the enormous increase in the national debt, the war still entails a very great and even increasing outlay of many millions annually for interest on the war debt and pensions for soldiers who served in the war and their dependents. To meet these unavoidable requirements and to resume the normal activities of peace, many of which were more or less crippled or even suspended during the war period, the country must continue to raise even more in the way of additional taxation than was obtained from the various war taxes during the actual duration of the conflict. If, therefore, there was no necessity for economy and thrift during the war period, they are at least quite as essential both now and for several years to come.

W J CHRISTIE'S LETTER

(We have been requested to publish the two following articles in reply to the W. J. Christie letter which appeared in these columns last week. The request for this reply comes from two of our citizens, one of whom requested the publication of the first letter. We have no hesitation in publishing both sides of the question, and feel confident that our readers are as well able to judge the matter as we are—Editor)

THE FARMER'S NEW FRIEND

For some time The Winnipeg Telegram has indulged in vicious attacks upon the United Grain Growers Ltd., which it has accused of robbing the past record, and has little regard for either truth or decency. The Tele-farmers, and the same journal has also been attacking The Grain Growers' Guide. In attacking the organized farmers, The Telegram is true to its past record, and has little regard for either truth or decency. The telegram charges J. R. Murray, of the United Grain Growers' Ltd. with appearing before the Board of Grain Commissioners, asking for changes in the terminal elevator tariffs, so that the farmers' company could take heavier toll off the farmers. The official record of the meeting, however, shows this to be an absolute falsehood. The fact is, that the Board of Grain Commissioners, in September, last, without consulting either the organized farmers or the grain trade, put out an order for reducing the allowance for wastage in cleaning at the terminals from one per cent. of the gross weight of a car to one per cent of the gross dockage. This was a stupid ruling, considered from an standpoint, and no member of the board has ever suggested that grain could be cleaned for this reduced allowance. For instance, the Government elevators, operated by the Grain Commissioners themselves, ignored the new ruling for the first two months of the year. Mr. Murray pointed out to the board the stupidity of the ruling, but did not ask for any change, stating that the organized farmers would be taking the question up at their meetings later on before the terminal elevator tariffs were fixed for another year, because, once fixed, these tariffs cannot be raised until the grain year is ended. This is one false attack by The Telegram exploded.

On the question of averages at the terminal elevators, The Winnipeg Telegram, and also W. J. Christie, a well-known Winnipeg businessman, who was at one time a director of The Winnipeg Telegram have been conducting a campaign against the United Grain Growers, and have accused the company of plundering the farmers. The fact that five other terminal elevators (including the Dominion government terminal) had larger gross overages and higher percentages than the farmers' company is not mentioned by these two apostles of virtue. They direct their attack against the farmers' company. Why? Neither of them state that the Board of Grain Commissioners has ordered all overages above one-quarter of one per cent. to be held firm confuscation by legislation. It would not help their case to tell these facts. Neither of them have explained either that the United Grain Growers have expressed the opinion that if the government didn't show terminal earnings too high, that the tariff charges should be reduced. It does not suit either The Telegram or Mr. Christie to give an honest statement of the case.

W. J. Christie recently joined a local Grain Growers' Association in Manitoba, and attended the district Grain Growers' convention at Portage la Prairie, on February 28. Before an audience of 330 grain growers he was given permission to indulge freely in his attack upon the United Grain Growers, which he did most viciously.

He was replied to by Mr. Murray, of the United Grain Growers, and the conclusion of the debate a vote was taken on Mr. Christie's resolution and a motion to form a special committee be appointed to investigate the matter of terminal elevator tariffs and overages instead of leaving it to the regularly constituted representatives of the organized farmers. He urged particularly that no representative of the United Grain Growers Limited be allowed to have anything to do with the Committee.

Farmers Not Fooled
J. R. Murray, of the United Grain Growers, replied to Mr. Christie and went fully into the facts of the matter, giving many facts which Mr. Christie had apparently consistently avoided. After a brief reply from Mr. Christie, the delegate from Elm Bank association, who introduced the resolution, asked permission to withdraw it. Mr. Murray, however urged that the convention vote upon the resolution, one way or the other. Upon the vote being taken, the resolution was defeated by an overwhelming majority. Only four delegates and three from Elm Bank Association voted for the resolution. Mr. Christie left his home in Winnipeg on the first train.

During the course of his remarks, Mr. Christie made some slighting remarks about the Grain Growers' Guide and explained that the Guide had not published a letter which he had sent to G. E. Chapman, editor of The Guide who was present at the meeting, and was asked by a delegate why he did not publish Mr. Christie's letter. Mr. Chapman said that he regretted both Mr. Christie's attack and the Winnipeg Telegram attack purely as political dodges, and that The Guide would answer The Telegram when the time was ripe.

THE KING WHO DIVIDED HIS GOODS

A king made a proclamation that whoever would come to him should receive whatever came to ask. The nobles came and asked for dukedoms and riches, and when they had been supplied, the poor people came and asked for similar gifts.

"You are too late," said the king to the poor folk. "The nobles have already had everything that I possess in this way. The only thing I have left is my power and authority as king. No one asked for this, and so I give it to you, that you may be the judges and masters of these rich nobles."

When the wealthy men heard what the king had done, they came imploring the king that he would withdraw such a gift.

"We cannot have these wretches to rule over us," they said.

"I do you no wrong," replied the king. "You had what you asked for, and took, as you thought, everything, so that there should be nothing left for the poor. Divide what you have with them, and I will resume my power."

The nobles felt that this was the best thing they could do, and so the poor received a share and were made comfortable.

"You are too late," said the king to

THE HERON, THE CAT AND THE BRAMBLE BUSH

Once upon a time and a very good time it was, though it was neither my time nor your time, nor anybody else's time, a heron, a cat, and a bramble-bush found some fairy gold and bought a farm with it.

The heron took the hay as his share, and mowed it and meant to carry it to market next day. But in the night a storm came and blew the hay into the river, and it floated away. Ever since then the heron stands mournfully by the side of rivers and cries:

"Pay me for my hay!"

The cat cut the oats and put them in a barn. But the storm drove all the rats and mice there for shelter and they ate up all the oats. Ever since then the cat springs on every rat and mouse she sees, and cries: "Pay me for my oats!"

The bramble bush took the wheat, and harvested it, and carried it to the market and sold it. Unhappily, the bramble bush sold on trust, and so no one ever paid up. Ever since then the stupid bramble bush takes hold of everybody who passes by, and cries: "Pay me for my wheat!"

THE PIGEON AND THE MAGPIE

You must never keep saying "I know, I know," when anybody is telling you anything. For that was what the wood-pigeon kept saying to the magpie.

The wood-pigeon is a silly, careless bird. All he has for a nest is an untidy heap of twigs raked together on a forked bough. There he sits and shivers in wintry weather, and you can hear him singing in a very doubtful way:

"When all the world's in flower,
I'll build a bonny bower
For two."

But when the green leaves come out, and the fields are bright with blossom, he forgets how cold he felt in winter and he sings joyfully:

"Now all the world's in flower,
Who'd ever waste an hour
In building of a bower?"

Who? Who? One spring morning, however, the magpie took pity on him, and began to show him how to make a nice warm snug nest. But all the time the silly wood-pigeon who did not know a thing about nest-making kept on saying

"I know, I know, I know!"

And at last the magpie got angry, and flew away, and said:

"Well if you know so much, do it all yourself."

So the wood-pigeon still has only a few bits of twigs to make a nest for himself.

ARTLAND PEOPLE STAND
BEHIND A. F. WRIGHT

the election yet it is generally conceded in the Artland district that the result of the election were in no way affected by such irregularities and it is felt that they were not in the least intentional but merely to allow every voter. Public sentiment is very strongly in favour of Mr Wright and as the case has been appealed there is every confidence that sufficient evidence will be brought forward to have Mr. Wright's character completely cleared.

Mr Wright is a gentleman well over 70 years of age and has at all times been very highly esteemed and his honour has always been held above reproach, so much so that the people of Artland have raised a fund of over $600 which will be available in defence of Mr. Wright.

Is rather a peculiar coincidence that Mr Wright was largely deprived of his commission as a Justice of the Peace, as was also Mr. Jukes; and both these gentlemen had filled the post therewith honour and credit.

The commissions were given to Messrs W. J. Fournier and Wilson.

Messrs Wright, Jukes and Swartwout are men of good local standing and of high integrity and the residents of Artland are behind them in every way.

It is felt that ulterior motives are behind the prosecution of Mr Wright and the fight will be on to a finish.

The case will be heard at the coming spring assizes at Scott and a full report will appear in the columns of this paper.

ARTLAND NOTES

ARTLAND RURAL MAIL

J. S. Palmer has lately seized the opportunity of scattering a few "crumbs of comfort" to those patient persons waiting for progress in the matter of the "Artland Rural Mail Route".

Judging from the tone of his communications to us we assume that he "holds a brief" on behalf of all those who are interested in the above project. That being so, we subjoin his remarks, which should prove of general interest to all our readers.

"One of our citizens while in Saskatoon recently, called at the office of the Post Office Inspector to see what "on earth was holding up the proposed Artland Rural Mail Route. The matter had been dragging on so long it had begun to be tiresome—The enquirer found the proposition in fair health though it was apparently running a risk of being strangled by "government red tape. Anyway to finish with, a full report went to Ottawa on the 6th of March, from the "Inspector's office. So with average luck, and provided we get the government to move we can reasonably hope they will be calling for tenders for the delivery of the mail "within the next two years."

James Coe, of the C.E. Force arrived in Artland last Thursday from Prussia.

Robert R. Jukes has received an intimation from the Attorney General that he is named for a Commissioned officer for death. Gazetteing will be made shortly.

JOHN DEERE WHEEL PLOW

With QUICK DETACHABLE SHARES
Unscrew One Nut—That's All

The latest improvement on John Deere Sulky and Gang Plows is the JOHN DEERE QUICK DETACHABLE SHARE. Unscrew one Nut and the share comes off. Slip Share on, tighten the one nut and you are ready to work. Shares on or off quick—That's the Idea.

Here are some of the advantages of the "Q. D." Shares

Ordinary shares have three or four bolt holes near the top. Q.D. shares have only one—near the middle. Consequently Q. D. shares are strong, where bolted shares are weak.

Q. D. shares fit tightly to the moldboard at every point of contact. They are held in place by even and well distributed pressure. No unequal strains as on old style bolted shares.

A dull Q. D. share can be replaced with another in the time taken to get the tools and plow ready for old style bolted shares.

The share can be removed in 30 seconds and replaced in 60 seconds. It takes from eight minutes to half an hour to change old style shares.

AN IRISHMAN'S LUCK Our Serial Story

CHAPTER III ITS SOLUTION

The observance of Sunday in Manitoba has hardly yet settled into anything which can be described by a general term, sufficient in itself, as when we speak of an 'old-fashioned' English Sunday, of a Scotch Sabbath. The first home-steader mostly settled in groups, linked by ties of nationality or former neighbouring in the older provinces of Canada, and they brought with them the customs and ideals of their old homes.

The Scandinavian settlement in the bush to the North, Sweden as it was usually called, had a little Lutheran church where they held a Sunday school all the year round, and church service when they happened to have a regular minister. Their young people danced frankly and with a good conscience of a Sunday evening—

THE OSTRICH

The ostrich befits his head in the sun and thinks he is high.
He is mistaken.

The property owner insures against fire and thinks he is protected.

He is as mistaken as the ostrich. What about theft, hail, automobile collision, live stock in transit, sprinkler leakage and many other forms of loss that may come—do come all of the time?

The only insurance is complete insurance—the safe, practical kind written by us through the old reliable

Insurance Service of the Hartford
Fire Insurance Co.

though the rumour of it was rather a scandal in the English-speaking settlements. West of the Enderybs the greater number of the settlers were Scotch Canadians who had brought from Ontario the Scotch Sabbath, a tendency to vote Grit and a capacity for getting, only equalled by their tenacity in keeping what they got. Here there would be even among them those who would be backsliders. Itself was typical—neglecting rights, maybe, for a day or two at the end of the week at busy times and then setting the hired man to clean them out on a Sabbath moaning—for the comfort of the cattle—and regard for the well-being of one's cattle is quite biblical. The views of the hired man have not been preserved.

Eastward of the English settlement, Irish Canadians, mostly from Ottawa Country predominated. For some reason they did not maintain their national characteristics to the same extent as their Scotch neighbors—possibly from a lack of the same uniformity in religious views. Not quite so regular in their church-going—a little more latitude in Sunday visiting—more thrifty than most of the Old Country English in their farming, but open-hearted and open-handed if a neighbour had ill-luck on his farm or sorrow in his home. A strain of Orangeman ran through most of them though softened and modernized in the younger generation by the broad influences of Western life—still, here and there you would run across an old-timer from some backwoods settlement who preserved all the colour and bitterness of the feuds of his youth, when a twelfth of July free fight with the Black Irish was a retrospective to New Year's and an anticipation to the next anniversary of the glorious victory of the Boyne.

Sunday at the Dingle followed the old Leicestershire Rectory pattern as far as Mrs. Enderyb's influence and circumstances would allow—morning service every other Sunday at the little English church a mile or two away, to which everybody went, and from which they returned to a cold dinner. In the afternoon Mr. Enderyb retired to the curtained-off end of the room dignified by the name of his study—to read. As he read in a recumbent position on a comfortable home-made lounge, and as he was not naturally a reading man, possibly he dozed a little, too, though he would not admit it. Mrs. Enderyb retired to her room to write home letters with similar probabilities. Bert and his sisters sat around the stove and read if it were winter, and in summer they would take their books and magazines out on the veranda where there was a hammock (usually appropriated by Daisy), and two or three old deck chairs in various stages of dilapidation and insecurity. More often than not two or three young Englishmen who were 'baching' in the settlement, would be asked up for dinner on church Sunday, or ride over during the afternoons on the off Sunday—glad to get away from the discomforts and loneliness of their own 'shacks'. They always met with a kindly welcome at the Dingle, and soon learned to recognize the fine shade of additional warmth in Mrs. Enderyb's greetings to those whose visit to the Dingle was prefaced by attendance at the church service. It was a quiet, wholesome day, and its home atmosphere did more to keep many a young Englishman straight than would have been effected by a more rigid Sabbatharian observance. Sometimes a newcomer would vote it rather slow to Daisy, and suggest a little tempest but even Daisy, if secretly sympathetic, knew her limitations.

The morning after the conversation in the preceding chapter brought a welcome change in the weather in the shape of a westerly wind and a clear sky. It also brought the fulfilment of Daisy's prophecy, for when Mr. Enderyb and Bert had gone to the stables after breakfast, Mrs. Enderyb announced to the girls that their father was quite willing for Miss Raye to board there, 'at any rate till we see—' as she added cautiously.

'Till we see whether she falls in love with Bert or tries to cut out Marion with—'

'Don't be ridiculous, Daisy,' said Marion sharply; 'mother means, of course, to let her stay.'

'I'll tell you what, Jim,' said Bert, 'we leave it to-night and I'll talk it over with my people at home—of course, mother don't know but perhaps my mother might ask Miss Raye up to the Dingle for a time, anyway till we see what can be done.'

'Well, well, little woman, we'll let that go.'

'Besides,' went on Mrs. Hardie, 'there are lots of folks in the settlement with more room and less work than I've got to do—but you men never think of your own wives—'

'I'll tell you what, Jim,' said Bert, 'we leave it to-night and I'll talk it over with my people at home—of course, mother don't know but perhaps my mother might ask Miss Raye up to the Dingle for a time, anyway till we see what can be done.'

'Well, it would be fine if she did, Bert, and I'm sure she would be more to go to work with your sisters than with any of us other folks.'

'And she would have our children for company on the way too,' said Bert. 'Added Mrs. Hardie, recovering her good humour, 'besides a few dollars is always handy on a farm, and I'm sure I'd be glad to have her come over and see her brother's of a Sunday or any time when he was not at work,' and so the matter was left.

course, till we see if she fits in to our life here, and if father likes her.'

'I wonder what the brother is like—if they both play, we shall be able to have all kinds of tennis this summer without Marion having to victimise herself to make a fourth for doubles.'

'Well, Daisy, I would not trust too much to that,' said Mrs. Enderyb, 'for if he is to work for Mr. Hardie he will not have much leisure for tennis.'

'I expect not,' still Jim Hardie is awfully good natured, and if I ask off for the young man a Saturday afternoon sometimes, I guess I shall get away with it—that is if Mrs. Hardie does not put her hands on him.'

'You had better leave that to your brother,' Daisy said. Mrs. Enderyb quietly took the meanwhile. Miss Raye can have the little west room, and we will clean that first this week and get Bert to whitewash it, and put up some shelves for her books, and a few hooks and whenever goes to town to bring up their luggage and get a nice wire stretcher and a little dressing table and—'

'I foresee that Miss Raye is going to be a much favored person,' interrupted Daisy; 'you see, Merrie, what it means to be a Parsons daughter and to go to Cheltenham—'

'And when Bert comes in' went on Mrs. Enderyb, 'you had better ask him to go down to Mr. Hardie's afternoons and arrange about meeting them in Minnedosa, and who is to bring them up to the settlement—and now, girls, you must hurry, for there are Bert and Sam coming in with the mornings milk, and the pans are to be scalded.'

Though quite astray as to the motives, Daisy was undoubtedly right in her surmise that Bert had suggested the solution that was now accepted of the boarding place difficulty. As they talked it over at the Hardie's supper-table the evening before, Mrs. Hardie had made her views quite plain in reply to a hesitating interrogative remark of her husband's. (I suppose little woman, you couldn't be managing?'

'If you are going to ask me to take her, Jim Hardie, you can say your words; I don't mind the brother, he can share the hired men's room, and one man more or less about the place does not make much difference—he'll be working and out of my way—but to have a schoolmate with her fine English—'

'Well, well, little woman, we'll let that go.'

'Besides,' went on Mrs. Hardie, 'there are lots of folks in the settlement with more room and less work than I've got to do—but you men never think of your own wives—'

'I'll tell you what, Jim,' said Bert, 'we leave it to-night and I'll talk it over with my people at home—of course, mother don't know but perhaps my mother might ask Miss Raye up to the Dingle for a time, anyway till we see what can be done.'

It was suggested that we leave the matter off prizes lists till we receive a copy of the model prize list now being prepared by the Fairs Association.

The following were elected to act as Committee:—C. M. Kirby; A. E. Keith; P. H. Peerry; J. Tooth; and T.L. Col. Rodden.

E. B. letter was read, followed by a heated discussion which resulted in the following motion by H. Foreman—J. Tooth—That the Sec. write the Superintendent of Fairs and Institute Association, asking the following:

If the Shorthorn breeders of Chauvin donated $100 for prizes in the Shorthorn class at the Agricultural Society and the Society give as prizes $300 Will the Government grant 2-3 or $200 to the Society? That Moved A. E. Keith-J. Tooth—That Patmore Nursery be advised that René Page won first prize in their special prize offered last year. Car.

C. M. Kirby suggested that Sec. insert a notice in the local paper that persons needing help, or persons needing employment should communicate with the secretary.

Mr Kirby reported that the Chauvin Chronicle was willing to place a half a column of the paper at the disposal of the Agricultural Society. This was accepted with thanks and the Secretary was instructed to write to the editor expressing their appreciation.

Moved by A. E. Keith that meeting adjourn.

CROP ROTATION FOR DRY FARMING

By M. J. TINLINE, B. S. A.
Sup't, Scott Experimental Farm

In preparation for the season of 1917 there is included a bare summary of the results secured on some 25 Illustration Stations, located in S.W. Saskatchewan and S.E. Alberta. In this Report a comparison is made between alternate summerfallow and wheat with two crops of wheat and then summerfallow. These stations are operated by farmers under the supervision of an advisor connected with the Experimental Farms. Careful records are kept of the cost of each of the operations necessary for crop production. The results are only for one season but it is interesting to note that 23 out of the 25 farmers report the cost of production to be less where the two crops of grain are grown between summerfalls than where the plan of alternate summerfallow and wheat is used.

a comparison is being made between two crops of wheat and then follow with a rotation arranged as follows: Wheat, Oats (seeded down to Western Rye Grass) Hay, Pasture, Summerfallow. The average yearly profit per acre from three year rotation is $4.08 and from the six years rotation is $5.30. One reason for this is wheat grown after breaking up the Western Rye Grass sod has on an average given $3.00 per acre more than where wheat has been grown on ordinary summerfallow.

Any farmers who are short of hay down a part of their farm to grass and breaking up again after taking off a couple of crops of hay.

$500 REWARD

MISS FELICIA GRAHAM, M.A.

To anyone giving information leading to the discovery of Miss Felicia Graham, ALIVE, a reward of Five Hundred Dollars will be paid. Last seen at 1:30 p.m., middle of the day walking on the street in the front of the Le Marchand Mansions, Edmonton, where she was a high school teacher. Described younger than her age; height 5 feet 7 or 8 inches; weight 120 to 135 lbs.; full face, fair complexion, tawny appearance; bluish grey eyes; dark brown hair; has whole set of white natural teeth two front ones slightly crooked; work on neck result of goitre operation; well built, likely thinner than the photo.

From all the known circumstances up to March 5 her family believes she is alive as her husband left her immediately after for a month in Edmonton; also the police, and no trace or clue was found and no one saw her disappear. What happened came very suddenly, without any apparent meditation on her part; as she left everything just as she was working at it and with plans made for the future. It is said she prepared to go shopping, to receive visitors, etc. but the influenza and it caused her a relapse from this and wandered away. She may be in some French or German home where she has been adopted and spoke broken language fluently. Had a good deal, always cheerful and clever in conversation. Had a fair knowledge of Spanish and Italian and may be in some foreign land.

She was wearing a long dark green coat; one piece, dark green dress green velvet turned down sailor hat, mink fur and black lace boots.

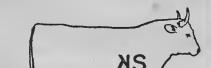

Report Any Information to EDMONTON SCHOOL BOARD or to the PROVINCIAL POLICE

NATION ASPECT OF THRIFT CAMPAIGN

ing the struggle, foreign capital markets being parity, at least, closed to us, we learned that we could more fully furnish our own capital than had been supposed. If, will be of great national advantage, and therefore of individual benefit, if the repayment of these domestic loans and the interest disbursements in the meantime, will be distributed in Canada, instead of requiring to be sent out of the country in the shape of products of native industry for which no corresponding return would be received.

Though the specific restrictions on borrowings abroad are now practically removed, yet the desirability of continuing to supply the capital needs of both governments and corporations from within Canada itself is quite as vital since the war as during it. The extensive war profits incidental to the production of munitions and other supplies of an urgent nature during the war period, are coming to an end. Many of the new industries arising, instead of subscribing largely to capital funds, will themselves be calling for capital in common with many other industries and corporations which were more or less out of the market funds, as we have seen, should come from within Canada, but will require more largely in future to be derived from smaller savings rather than from participation in the capital supply of the country makes for economic and social stability and a more intelligent interest in the efficient administration of national enterprise.

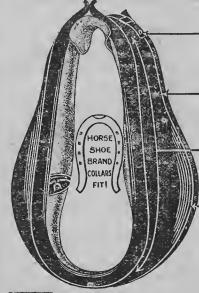

It is not desirable that the needs of the Dominion Government should curtail the capital fund for general economic reconstruction and new developments. Further, small investors have not the knowledge and experience requisite to make wise investments in the general interest of the country. Moreover, it is not practicable to make small and frequent investments in these lines. It is absolutely safe, however, and perfectly practicable to make small investments in the national funds. If, therefore, the small investors in sufficient numbers and with sufficient frequency will furnish the Dominion Government from their personal savings with a considerable proportion of the additional funds which it requires, either to meet new obligations or cancel maturing claims, the larger savings available for investment may be devoted to the supply of the industrial capital of the country.

and are not likely to diminish in pro-

years. The incomes of skilled labor, clerical employees, agriculturists and certain other classes have been considerably increased within the past few years, portion to the fall in the cost of living. Such incomes, therefore afford a much larger range for the exercise of economy and thrift, and thus for the accumulation of moderate but substantial funds of capital. Not only will these, if invested with the government, be the means of their own increase, but will furnish a reserve for emergencies or assistance in declining years. There are, of course, many other phases of this subject, especially those connected with the personal adventure of the small investors in the national funds, through the purchase of thrift stamps or otherwise. The above indications, however, sufficiently indicate at once the national advantage and the urgent national requirement that every form of saving is necessary to meet the present and future needs for additional domestic capital for the maintenance and development of the country.
